

Exporting References from RefWorks to other Reference Management Tools

last updated: 12 Nov 2015

Why switch to other tools?

- PolyU is ceasing subscription to Refworks

- With effect from 31 August 2016, the Library will cease subscription to RefWorks.
- This means you will no longer have access to your references in your RefWorks account after 31 August 2016.
- We recommend that you export your references from RefWorks to EndNote, or other free reference managers (eg Mendeley or Zotero) before 31 August 2016.

- Graduating or leaving PolyU

- You may be graduating soon and will no longer have access to the subscribed reference managers like RefWorks or EndNote.
- If you would like to keep your references, we recommend that you export your references to free reference managers where you can continue to use after you leave PolyU.

- Using more than 1 reference managers

- Different reference managers have different strengths and sometimes, in the course of our research and writing, we use more than 1 reference managers to meet different needs.

Switching between tools?

- References saved in RefWorks can be exported as a text file.
- The exported text file can then be imported into other reference management tools such as EndNote or Mendeley.
- You may refer to the example in following slides.

Example: Exporting references from RefWorks to EndNote

If you have multiple folders in RefWorks to keep references for different projects/papers and would like to keep the folder structure in EndNote, we recommend that

- you export the references by individual folder
- create new libraries in EndNote for each
